Texas Water Symposium

Our limited Groundwater Supply:
Who's desired future conditions are we planning for?

This event kicks off the third season of the popular Texas Water Symposium, a one hour discussion which is recorded and aired on Texas Public Radio. No other topic is as critical to the future of all Texans. Come learn with us about WATER.

Will there be adequate water for your children and grandchildren? Will our hill country springs continue to flow? What role does science play in determining water planning and the process currently underway to determine the "Desired Future Conditions" of our limited groundwater supply.
